

Your specialist nurse will give you a call about 2 weeks after your medical assessment to check that everything is OK and to see if there is anything else we can help with. If you prefer to be contacted in another way, please let us know.

After the medical assessment, the doctors will write a report summarising what has happened during your assessment. They will normally share this report with other professionals such as the police, children's social care and your GP so that these people can help keep you safe and provide any support you might want in the future. This information is considered confidential and will never be shared with anyone who is not a part of the support team.

Who is the service for?

This service is for all children and young people from across Devon, Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly who have, or may have been, sexually assaulted or abused.

What is a forensic medical assessment?

The forensic medical assessment is to check that everything is alright. It is carried out by an NHS doctor who has special skills in this area.

If you have told someone about something that has happened to you, the assessment may also be able to provide evidence to support what you've said. You should never be made to feel that you are responsible for what happened. This assessment is not about proving what you said is true, it's about making sure that you are physically ok, and if anything needs to be done to help you through this.

The assessment may include:

- the doctor answering any questions you have and talking about things you may be worried about;
- the doctor asking you questions about your health and your family;
- listening to your heart and lungs, feeling your abdomen (tummy), checking your ears, nose and throat;
- checking for any injuries or infections that you may have;
- if you are female, you may require emergency contraception, such as the 'morning after pill' to prevent the risk of pregnancy. This will be provided free of charge if needed.

The important thing to remember about this assessment is that it's your body and you are in charge. If you don't want a particular part of the assessment, just say and the doctors will miss this bit out for you.

Who does the assessment?

The examination will always be done by a doctor from the NHS. Our doctors have lots of special skills and experience of working with young people. They are calm, kind and patient. Sometimes you may be seen by two doctors.

There will also be a specialist nurse who will look after you while you are with us.

Where will the assessment take place?

Most forensic medical assessments take place at the Exeter SARC (Sexual Assault Referral Centre). The Exeter SARC provides a private and quiet place for your assessment.

When will the assessment take place?

We will usually make an appointment with you to attend your medical assessment at a time that is convenient for you. This would normally be Monday to Friday 9am to 5pm, but do not worry if you can't make it, we also have an 'emergency' service at weekends.

What happens after an assessment?

During your medical assessment we will make a plan with you about what will happen next. We may suggest other services that we think might be able to help you and will offer to contact them for you.
